River Junction Goulburn and Broken Rivers

The Goulburn River is named after Major Frederick Goulburn, Colonial Secretary and registrar of the records of the Colony of New South Wales (1820 - 1824). The Goulburn River was discovered by Hume and Hovell in December 1824. In the early days of its discovery, it had various names - Monool, Grubool, Grewan and the native name ‘Bayunga’ or ‘Bayungun’.

None of the other names found favour with the public and the name Goulburn was eventually chosen. The name ‘Bayunga’ is the native name for ‘Gowangardie’ in the Parish of Currawa.

The river is divided by the Waranga and the Broken streams, one known as “Gray’s” in the Parish of Goorambat, and the other known as “Gronggrong”, the Parish of Currawa.

The Broken River joins the Goulburn River on the south west boundary of Shepparton.

The native name for the Broken River is ‘Warrengang’.
